1/ I try to analyze dispassionately. But I will admit I am ANGRY about the way we have largely ignored the massive harm lockdowns and school closings have on kids. Remember: anyone under 30 is at almost ZERO risk here (there are always outliers; planes crash but flying is safe).

2/ Children, more than anyone else, suffer immediately from the lockdowns. They're denied school. They're denied normal socializing with their friends. In many places they have even - bizarrely - been denied the chance to play outside.

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 10 de abr.

3/ The stress even on healthy families is incredible. And for children in troubled families, the cost is far higher; for those kids, schools may well be the only chance they have to be seen every day by an adult who is not high or abusive.

16 195 1,1 mil

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 10 de abr.

4/ Of all the choices we've made, sacrificing the mental health of children at zero risk from this illness is the LEAST acceptable. But so many in the media are young and don't have children, or perhaps are married couples with one child (an equation that makes care easier).

COVID-19 has killed more Americans in 6 weeks than the flu does in a year.

And that is WITH all the stark measures we've taken.

1/ So on Monday, @laurawags of @vice asked me for an interview, and I agreed, under certain very specifuc conditions. Let's see what happened next. Note: Laura and I have never spoken by phone - this email thread is the entirety of our communication:

Laura Wagner

Hi Alex,

I'm a reporter with VICE and I'm interested in doing a Q&A with you about your coronavirus work. Your positions on COVID and COVID guidelines have certainly struck a nerve with many people and I think a straightforward Q&A--where you can lay out where and how media has biffed coverage of the coronavirus and I can ask you follow up questions about it--would be legitimately useful for our readers. I'm envisioning a fairly free-flowing discussion which I would then transcribe for publication.

Is this something you'd be interested in?

Alex Berenson

I'm very short on time. If you want to ask questions over email I will try to answer them, but only on the condition you don't do it Chatbot-style and annotate or second-guess me after I have answered (in other words, it would have to be the equivalent of a live on-air interview). You ask, I answer, that's the end of it

2/ Of note, the paper assumes a reproduction cycle of 4 days. Thus the epidemic can spread fast - and will be hugely sensitive to changes in R (how many people 1 infected person infects in turn). At an R of 3.1 with a cycle of 4 days, 1 infection will become 10,000 in a month!

3/ In fact, the paper states explicitly "that U.S. hospitals could absorb a maximum of 26,000 to 56,000 additional ventilators at the peak of a national pandemic, as safe use of ventilators requires trained personnel."

4/ In other words, whatever happens with COVID, if we built a million new ventilators, 950,000 would be furniture.

Added bonus: the paper reports the US already has far more critical care beds per-capita than other nations: 35 per 100,000, compared to 12 in Italy, 7 in the UK...

5/ Here's a link to the paper (thoughtfully provided by the Times) so you can read and judge it for yourself.

I don't understand the point of trying to drive panic with stories that are so misleading - and, frankly, so easily checked.

To avoid a rebound in transmission, these policies will need to be maintained until large stocks of vaccine are available to immunise the population – which could be 18 months or more. Adaptive hospital surveillance-based triggers for switching on and off population wide social distancing and school closure offer greater robustness to uncertainty than fixed duration interventions and can be adapted for regional use (e.g. at the state level in the US). Given local epidemics are not perfectly synchronised, local policies are also more efficient and can achieve comparable levels of suppression to national policies while being in force for a slightly smaller proportion of the time. However, we estimate that for a national GB policy, social distancing would need to be in force for at least 2/3 of the time (for $R_0 = 2.4$, see Table 4) until a vaccine was available.

However, there are very large uncertainties around the transmission of this virus, the likely effectiveness of different policies and the extent to which the population spontaneously adopts risk reducing behaviours. This means it is difficult to be definitive about the likely initial duration of measures which will be required, except that it will be several months. Future decisions on when and for how long to relax policies will need to be informed by ongoing surveillance.

The measures used to achieve suppression might also evolve over time. As case numbers fall, it becomes more feasible to adopt intensive testing, contact tracing and quarantine measures akin to the strategies being employed in South Korea today. Technology – such as mobile phone apps that

As Neil explicitly stated in the testimony you're all up in arms about - those "new" numbers require the social distancing measures kept in place until enough testing is available to follow South Korea.

As pointed out - that figure (fig3) does show a rebound when interventions turn off, but the plan is to keep interventions for (or to "pump the breaks") until a solution comes in place

This is probably right; the biggest, hardest-hit regions and states - SE Texas, Miami, AZ - have all flattened of late, though I'm cautious about calling a peak. Worth nothing: actual reported deaths in MIA/SETX remain quite low, and lag should be minimal for regional reporting.

To my mind the hospital data are likely to provide a more accurate first cut - a better look at dying from and not WITH [illegible] - than this bureaucratic matching process, especially now that national excess mortality has fallen to ~0 - but I suppose Team Apocalypse will disagree.

1/ #COVID-19 is devastating hospitals and employees nationally. But not for the reason you think. They are empty - prepared for a surge that has not come - and burning cash. An executive reports his group's stronger hospitals have "months" of cash; the weaker ones have "weeks."

about 15 other CFOs

- Seeing decline in volume about 40% and similar revenue cut – his low was about 50% cut in volume but only about 2-5% COVID
- Outpatient basically is a zero
- Only exception is hot spots which have a lot of volume but much lower revenue and higher cost because of PPE
- A reasonable way to think about it is down 40-60% at the peak
- No one expects to recapture everything they lost
- Staff
  - Not flexing yet
  - Post spike in likely have to make some adjustments
  - Could take 40% off of earnings and need to reduce staffing by 10% but not close to enough
- Longer term impact

Death spiral? You mean the fact deaths have fallen 2/3 since April, that the US still trails ITA/ESP/UK/FRA in deaths per capita, or that a total of 9,000 Americans under 55 have died of the ro this year (far fewer than car accidents or overdoses). That is kind of a spiral, sure.

By quite low I mean single digits to teens daily; it is obvious now that a lot of the reported state deaths come from matching deaths from weeks or months ago to [illegible] test registries.

To my mind the hospital data are likely to provide a more accurate first cut - a better look at dying from and not WITH #Covid - than this bureaucratic matching process, especially now that national excess mortality has fallen to ~0 - but I suppose Team Apocalypse will disagree.

Keeping schools closed is a bad option too, for reasons discussed at length. I think this is the heart of AAP's recommendations - plan to be in person and adjust if necessary, rather than plan for distance and, I don't know, adjust if the Glorious Vaccine descends from on high?

1/ #COVID—19 is devastating hospitals and employees nationally. But not for the reason you think. They are empty - prepared for a surge that has not come - and burning cash. An executive reports his group's stronger hospitals have "months" of cash; the weaker ones have "weeks."

about 15 other CFOs

- Seeing decline in volume about 40% and similar revenue cut – his low was about 50% cut in volume but only about 2-5% COVID
- Outpatient basically is a zero
- Only exception is hot spots which have a lot of volume but much lower revenue and higher cost because of PPE
- A reasonable way to think about it is down 40-60% at the peak
- No one expects to recapture everything they lost
- Staff
  - Not flexing yet
  - Post spike in likely have to make some adjustments
  - Could take 40% off of earnings and need to reduce staffing by 10% but not close to enough
- Longer term impact

1/ I try to analyze dispassionately. But I will admit I am ANGRY about the way we have largely ignored the massive harm lockdowns and school closings have on kids. Remember: anyone under 30 is at almost ZERO risk here (there are always outliers; planes crash but flying is safe).

2/ Children, more than anyone else, suffer immediately from the lockdowns. They're denied school. They're denied normal socializing with their friends. In many places they have even - bizarrely - been denied the chance to play outside.

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 10 de abr.

3/ The stress even on healthy families is incredible. And for children in troubled families, the cost is far higher; for those kids, schools may well be the only chance they have to be seen every day by an adult who is not high or abusive.

16 195 1,1 mil

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 10 de abr.

4/ Of all the choices we've made, sacrificing the mental health of children at zero risk from this illness is the LEAST acceptable. But so many in the media are young and don't have children, or perhaps are married couples with one child (an equation that makes care easier).

Hi Alex,

I'm a reporter with VICE and I'm interested in doing a Q&A with you about your coronavirus work. Your positions on COVID and COVID guidelines have certainly struck a nerve with many people and I think a straightforward Q&A--where you can lay out where and how media has biffed coverage of the coronavirus and I can ask you follow up questions about it--would be legitimately useful for our readers. I'm envisioning a fairly free-flowing discussion which I would then transcribe for publication.

Is this something you'd be interested in?

Alex Berenson

I'm very short on time. If you want to ask questions over email I will try to answer them, but only on the condition you don't do it Chatter-style and annotate or second-guess me after I have answered (in other words, it would have to be the equivalent of a live on-air interview). You ask, I answer, that's the end of it

From a physician in Indiana who has signed and reviewed death certificates for almost 50 years: “doctors are using death by COVID-19 as a convenient diagnosis...”

Cause of death fallacy

Lee A. Fischer, M.D.

I'm a family physician who graduated med school in '72 and practiced family med in West Palm Beach for 31 years. During that time I signed hundreds of death certificates. For the last 25+ years I've reviewed and testified in hundreds of medical negligence cases. In the last 5 years 90% involved nursing home negligence. Obviously many of these nursing patients died so I review a lot of death certificates. I can tell you that more often than not the cause of death listed bares no resemblance to the actual cause. Many doctors still list "cardiorespiratory arrest" as

I believe that doctors are using death by COVID-19 as a convenient diagnosis when they don't really know what caused their death. Unless someone has tested + for the virus and had symptoms and died there is no way to attribute their death to COVID-19. As you point out the # of deaths due to the "pandemic" is highly inflated and in my opinion for political gain. Keep spreading the news and your right on point analysis.

1/ This email came from a German reader. To summarize: on April 15 the official German public health/disease control institute published a paper showing that moderate social distancing reduced #SARS_CoV2 spread but the hard lockdown was useless.

2/ Of note, the paper assumes a reproduction cycle of 4 days. Thus the epidemic can spread fast - and will be hugely sensitive to changes in R (how many people 1 infected person infects in turn). At an R of 3,1 with a cycle of 4 days, 1 infection will become 10,000 in a month!

3/ So this is yet more evidence #SARSCoV2 has been present for longer and spread wider in the US than previously understood (because the replication cycle is so short and the transmission rate so high, even two weeks could make a 5-15x difference in the number of infections).

Why can't the US media and (blue-state) policymakers keep two ideas in mind at once? #SARSCoV2 can be dangerous, especially to the elderly - but to respond by denying kids an education (and generally wrecking the economy and society with lockdowns of dubious value) is a mistake.

And there's a lot of evidence that many kids regress during the normal summer break - and that poor kids especially suffer, because their parent(s) may not have the time or resources to help them.

n therefore population-wide social distancing combined with home isolation of cases and school and university closure.

To avoid a rebound in transmission, these policies will need to be maintained until large stocks of vaccine are available to immunise the population – which could be 18 months or more. Adaptive hospital surveillance-based triggers for switching on and off population-wide social distancing and school closure offer greater robustness to uncertainty than fixed duration interventions and can be adapted for regional use (e.g. at the state level in the US). Given local epidemics are not perfectly synchronised, local policies are also more efficient and can achieve comparable levels of suppression to national policies while being in force for a slightly smaller proportion of the time. However, we estimate that for a national GB policy, social distancing would need to be in force for at least 2/3 of the time (for $R_0 = 2.4$, see Table 4) until a vaccine was available.

However, there are very large uncertainties around the transmission of this virus, the likely effectiveness of different policies and the extent to which the population spontaneously adopts risk reducing behaviours. This means it is difficult to be definitive about the likely initial duration of measures which will be required, except that it will be several months. Future decisions on when and for how long to relax policies will need to be informed by ongoing surveillance.

The measures used to achieve suppression might also evolve over time. As case numbers fall, it becomes more feasible to adopt intensive testing, contact tracing and quarantine measures akin to the strategies being employed in South Korea today. Technology – such as mobile phone apps that

As Neil explicitly stated in the testimony you're all up in arms about - those "new" numbers require the social distancing measures kept in place until enough testing is available to follow South Korea.

1/ I try to analyze dispassionately. But I will admit I am ANGRY about the way we have largely ignored the massive harm lockdowns and school closings have on kids. Remember: anyone under 30 is at almost ZERO risk here (there are always outliers; planes crash but flying is safe).

2/ Children, more than anyone else, suffer immediately from the lockdowns. They're denied school. They're denied normal socializing with their friends. In many places they have even - bizarrely - been denied the chance to play outside.

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 10 de abr.

3/ The stress even on healthy families is incredible. And for children in troubled families, the cost is far higher; for those kids, schools may well be the only chance they have to be seen every day by an adult who is not high or abusive.

15  195  1,1 mil

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 10 de abr.

4/ Of all the choices we've made, sacrificing the mental health of children at zero risk from this illness is the LEAST acceptable. But so many in the media are young and don't have children, or perhaps are married couples with one child (an equation that makes care easier).

Serious question and I hope you respond with seriousness too.

COVID-19 has killed more Americans in 6 weeks than the flu does in a year.

And that is WITH all the stark measures we've taken.

"Flu +" seems like an understatement, no?

My name is [illegible] and I am an Intervention Specialist (teach special ed). My own son is on the Autism spectrum, on the high functioning end. He has been struggling since this whole lockdown started. He is not a social butterfly, but he does enjoy time with school friends. He needs structure and predictability and that is clearly not happening now. I try to keep a certain structure to our days, but it's hard because I am working, my husband is working and his older brother has lots of schoolwork he also needs help with. The other thing Colin is struggling with is not understanding why he has to do schoolwork when he's not in school.. there have been many meltdowns and I expect many more before all is said and done.

I've never like social media for children because I think it keeps them from face to face interactions which are critical for their growing minds. However, due to the closure, they

I have a senior daughter in high school and a son who has autism and is in his first year of tech school. Both are having issues with extremely high anxiety and now I'm seeing depression.

My daughter's senior year is a wash, but she's still expected to take an AP exam next month. The digital learning is a joke - the platforms crash every day.

They both are working still - my son at a grocery store and daughter at a fast food restaurant. I'm grateful for that - it's their only normalcy.

2/ Unfortunately, though the model updated just now, its projections remain inaccurate for actual use TODAY: for example, it predicts New York state on April 5 will need 24,000 beds and 6,000 ICU beds, about 1/3 more than the actual usage today. Not sure what to say about this...

last posting for my state said peak resource use would be April 9, now says it WAS March 23.

First "social distancing" and school closure started March 18, restaurants, etc., closed March 25.

So we peaked BEFORE the significant closures even began?

1/ One last point on the [illegible] model: It now predicts about 15,600 New York state deaths. About the only thing the model has gotten right is short term death counts; that figure seems at least marginally plausible...

Great news. @IHME_UW updated its model again - two days after the last revision. Total deaths fell from 81K to under 61K hospitalizations fell from 140K to 90K (1/3 last week's projection) m. The peak is now projected in 3 days. Can we PLEASE talk about reopening the nation?

Time to start using more straightforward language and calling out people who don't tell the truth, like @pbump. The original model explicitly accounted for the effect of lockdowns. It was wrong in real-time, embarrassingly so; that's why it's been updated. (It's still wrong.)

Philip Bump @pbump
A notable shift downward in projected deaths from coronavirus is already being spun as "experts were wrong!!" Instead of "hey, the thing experts said would drive down deaths might be driving down deaths."

1/ I'm going to try to explain this once more for all the blue-checks insisting that they KNOW lockdowns work.

The models failed. In real time. Even in NY state, the April 1 iteration of @IHME_UW model estimated four times the hospitalizations last week as were taking place.

1 110 ретвитов 2 773 отметки «Нравится»

104 1,1 тыс. 2,8 тыс.

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 10 апр.

2/ But it's crucial to understand WHY they failed.

There is a TIME LAG between infection, symptoms, hospitalization, ICU care, and death. 5 days on average from infection to symptoms, several more days to hospitalization, 2-3 more to ICU care. These are averages, but correct.

9 152 556

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 10 апр.

3/ The models assumed (not unreasonably) that in places like New York, lockdowns had come TOO LATE. Between March 17 and March 25, hospitalizations in NY rose 7X. The models assumed that because of the time lag, the rise would go on UNTIL THE EFFECTS OF THE LOCKDOWN KICKED IN...

3/ So this is yet more evidence #SARSCoV2 has been present for longer and spread wider in the US than previously understood (because the replication cycle is so short and the transmission rate so high, even two weeks could make a 5-15x difference in the number of infections).

Why can't the US media and (blue-state) policymakers keep two ideas in mind at once? #SARSCoV2 can be dangerous, especially to the elderly - but to respond by denying kids an education (and generally wrecking the economy and society with lockdowns of dubious value) is a mistake.

Remember - it is only April 21. In most states, schools have been out for only about a month. Closing through the end of the school year means another TWO months of lost schooling, and a five-plus-month break overall...

And there's a lot of evidence that many kids regress during the normal summer break - and that poor kids especially suffer, because their parent(s) may not have the time or resources to help them.

Be careful, Alec. You're already in trouble for raising questions about #sarscov2. Start pointing out many cities are headed back to 1990s levels of violence and pretty soon you too will be a traitor to the class. (Though it's more fun over here. You get to tell the truth.)

Insanity in New Jersey: the @njea - the state teachers union - plans to demand #SARSCoV2 tests for all students before they return to school, WEEKLY tests, and DOOR-TO-DOOR mandatory masks for all students.

Providing for the basic health and well-being of students and staff is the foundation that all school re-opening plans must be built on. It's a fact that students can't learn effectively, and staff can't do their jobs effectively when they don't feel safe in their learning/working environment (Maslow, A., 1943. A Theory of Human Motivation. Psychological Review, 50(4), pp.370-396). In the current COVID-19 pandemic, this feeling of safety doesn't just apply to one's own physical well-being. The anxiety of infecting at-risk family members as a result of engaging in in-person instruction can be just as debilitating as fears for one's own health. All people entering a school facility need to feel confident that they are not putting their health and that of their family at risk. Below are the MINIMUM ACCEPTABLE STANDARDS that school employees must demand to be included in each district's reopening plan. Please review these and work with your Field Representative should your district's plan fail to meet any of these standards.

Student and Staff Issues

1. The district shall provide COVID-19 testing for all students and staff during the week prior to the first day of attendance, with the results being sent directly to the individual and the local school district's designated health officer. In the event a district can't provide for testing, students and staff shall seek testing through their own healthcare provider with all costs being reimbursed through the district. Staff unable to obtain a test within the week prior to the first day of attendance shall submit proof of a scheduled test, and be placed on either virtual instruction or paid administrative leave, until such time as a test result can be produced. Students who are unable to obtain a test within the week prior to the first day of attendance shall submit proof of a scheduled test and be placed on virtual instruction until such time as a test result can be produced. All students and staff shall present proof of a negative Covid-19 screening test prior to the first day of attendance. Students or staff suspected of exposure, or who have a positive positive test, must stay out of school for 14 days or until they receive a negative test result before returning to school.

Reminder: Good Public Health practices dictate that infected persons and recent exposure students and staff should be required to provide documentation that they are not infected prior to the start of school. The CDC says that the population "considered most at risk for severe illness and deserving special focus of risk communication" is school-aged children (ages 5-17 yo).

2. Cloth masks must be worn 'door to door'. All students and staff shall wear their cloth mask at their bus stops prior to boarding the bus, or, for walkers/drop-off students, when entering school grounds. Masks must remain in place until leaving school or exiting the bus. Consequences for refusal to wear the required mask shall be clearly delineated in board policy and in the student/parent handbook, and shall include consequences up to and including suspension.

Reminder: Multiple experts, including the CDC, now definitively admit that one can catch COVID through droplets emitted by infected individuals. [illegible] According to the CDC, the virus is "spreading easily and sustainably in the community." There is also mounting evidence, including by the World Health Organization, that it may also be spread by tiny Die Verbreitung des Coronavirus in Kindergärten, Schulen und Familien wurde bisher offenbar überschätzt. Eine Studie der Medizinischen Fakultät der Technischen Universität Dresden, für die seit der Wiedereröffnung der Schulen in Sachsen im Frühjahr mehr als 2000 Schüler und Lehrer auf Antikörper getestet wurden, lieferte weder einen Beleg dafür, dass sich das Virus in Schulen besonders schnell verbreitet, noch dafür, dass es durch Kinder besonders häufig übertragen wird. „Es ist eher das Gegenteil der Fall", sagte Studienleiter Reinhard Berner, Direktor der Poliklinik für Kinder und Jugendmedizin des Dresdner Universitätsklinikums. „Kinder wirken eher als Bremsklötze der Infektion. Total reported #covid deaths in AZ/FL/TX (60 million people) yesterday: 123. I know, it's a Sunday, reporting lags. But deaths yesterday were under 5% of what they were in NY (per-capita) in April. This just is not a catastrophe no matter how hard the media wants to make it one.

Alex,

Got the below from my NJ school today. They will require masks all day, so look what they want us to do now! My daughter is in kindergarten. The madness needs to stop.

At this time, we ask that you help us prepare to reopen in September by practicing mask/face covering endurance with your children.

Live look at the five states with the most #SARSCoV2 cases. Two of these, total population 28 million, have 48,000 #covid deaths. Two others, population 50 million, have 7,500 deaths. (True story.) Can you guess which two the media love? Or which two have Republican governors?

| USA State | Total Cases | New Cases | Total Deaths | New Deaths |

More panic out of Florida: the CEO of a major hospital system in central Florida (22,000 employees) says they have enough ICU beds, can add more, and have lots of PPE. And, oh yeah, death rates and length of ICU stay are dropping.

Did I say panic? I meant PANIC!

seven Florida counties have less than 10 percent intensive care bed capacity.

What You Need To Know

- Orange County AdventHealth ICU capacity at 25 percent
- PREVIOUS STORY: Florida Tops One Million With More Than 15,000 Day Confirmed Cases

This comes as our daily coronavirus case counts continue to set records.

In Orange County, a state dashboard is reporting close to 550 COVID-19 related hospitalizations.

Adult ICU bed availability across all Orange County hospitals is currently at 24.93 percent. Shaw added ICU length of stay for coronavirus and the death rate have each dropped in half.

"We have adequate personal protective equipment," Shaw said. "We have a stockpile of ventilators, and we have an amazing clinical team that have taken best practices from around the world and put them into our treatment

Conclusions This study is the first RCT of cloth masks, and the results caution against the use of cloth masks. This is an important finding to inform occupational health and safety. Moisture retention, reuse of cloth masks and poor filtration may result in increased risk of infection. Further research is needed to inform the widespread use of cloth masks globally. However, as a precautionary measure, cloth masks should not be recommended for HCWs, particularly in high-risk situations, and guidelines need to be updated.

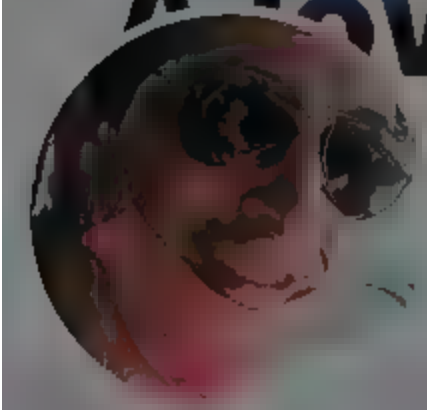
And who wanted Yeltsin to win . . .
President Bill Clinton!
* What we're seeing is just a remodel of a previous policy used for Yeltsin!

The Washington Post

President Boris Yeltsin, polling in the single digits, met with U.S. President Bill Clinton in the Kremlin and complained that his prospects for reelection were "not exactly brilliant." So began Yeltsin's campaign to get an American president to influence Russia's 1996 election.



His first request concerned NATO, which Clinton had been working to enlarge.

From a nurse in Houston: the overall picture is far less dire than the media reports (first email is personal impressions, second and third a census count from the hospital system).

Added bonus: the paper reports the US already has far more critical care beds per-capita than other nations: 35 per 100,000, compared to 12 in Italy, 7 in the UK...

I don't understand the point of trying to drive panic with stories that are so misleading - and, frankly, so easily checked.

Staggering? 1 in 2,000 Swedes have died of #Covid, James, and the average of death is in the mid-80s.

In a country of 10 million people, 70 under the age of 50 have died.

And now they may be close to herd immunity (time will tell).

I take it back. The facts are staggering.

Do you think unpresideted numbers of patients would boarding in ERs across Houston, receiving sub-optimal care, if those empty beds were staffed and operational today? This is why numbers need context.

I'm not talking about people waiting to be seen in an ER. We reported on people who need to be admitted who are spending multiple days in ER beds because those surge ICU beds only exist on paper until there's staff in place. It's called ER boarding, and it's not the norm.

Don't look now, but Arizona may have topped out too. After tripling in the month through July 7, #covid hospitalizations have been flat for a week. (There have been plateaus before, but this one is longer.) And overall hospitalizations have been steady a month.

Yes, hospitals in Houston are under strain, and some patients are being seen and cared for in one unit of the hospital rather than another (and preferable) unit. That sounds accurate. It also doesn't sound anything like what your story - much less your headline - said.

All i know is Scott golieb thinks the infection rate is 10x the declared infection rate. So take Alex's number and potentially divide by 10 to get true fatality rate. But he won't do that since it's speculation, he stuck with facts.

without seroprevalence data to inform epidemic parameters. We measured the seroprevalence of antibodies to SARS-CoV-2 in Santa Clara County. Methods On 4/3-4/4, 2,50 adult county residents for antibodies to SARS-CoV-2 using a lateral flow immunoassay. Participants were recruited using Facebook ads targeting a representative sample of the county by demographic and geographic characteristics. We report the prevalence of antibodies to SARS-CoV-2 in a sample of 3,330 people, adjusting for zip code, sex, and race/ethnicity. We also adjust for test performance characteristics using 3 different estimates: i) the test manufacturer's data, ii) a sample of 37 positives and 30 negatives controls tested at Stanford, and iii) a pooled weighted of both. Results The unadjusted prevalence of IgG positive to SARS-CoV-2 in Santa Clara [illegible] The population prevalence of SARS-CoV-2 antibodies in Santa Clara County implies that the infection is much more widespread than indicated by the number of confirmed cases. Population prevalence estimates can now be used to calibrate epidemic and mortality projections.

Hi Alex,

I have 3 children, 2 of whom are special needs.

My son is 4 with autism. His aba therapy ceased coming to our which is 6 hours per day,I, 5 days per week. Without intensive aba he is restless and hyper focused on one interest for days on end.

My daughter is 2 with cerebral palsy. Her physical therapy has ceased and the progress she was making toward walking has stalled completely.

We work with them the best we know throughout the day but we arent trained and we also have jobs.

Thanks

Media reasonably consider 20M unemployed Americans as their main contribution to DNC 2020 campaign.

Accordingly, the current goal of C19 hysteria is to keep unemployment growing.

PS. As a bonus the same hysteria also make it easy to falsify elections results by Vote-by-Mail

This is important because it is all part of the Dem/liberal playbook. The fact that the media has become nothing more than gossip rags and reality tv at its worst is horrifying. And many are believing it hook, line and sinker.

I posted this meta-analysis - from a peer-reviewed journal published by @cdcgov - a while back but it seems like a good time to do so again, this time with highlighting! For those of you who missed it, here's the takeaway: Masks are useless.

In our systematic review, we identified 10 RCTs that reported estimates of the effectiveness of face masks in reducing laboratory-confirmed influenza virus infections in the community from literature published during 1946–July 27, 2018. In pooled analysis, we found no significant reduction in influenza transmission with the use of face masks (RR 0.78, 95% CI 0.51–1.20; $I^2$ = 30%, p = 0.25) (Figure 2). One study evaluated the use of masks among pilgrims from Australia during the Hajj pilgrimage and reported no major difference in the risk for laboratory-confirmed influenza virus infection in the control or mask group (33). Two studies in university settings assessed the effectiveness of

3/ In fact, the paper states explicitly "that U.S. hospitals could absorb a maximum of 26,000 to 56,000 additional ventilators at the peak of a national pandemic, as safe use of ventilators requires trained personnel."

4/ In other words, whatever happens with COVID, if we built a million new ventilators, 950,000 would be furniture.

Added bonus: the paper reports the US already has far more critical care beds per-capita than other nations: 35 per 100,000, compared to 12 in Italy, 7 in the UK...

5/ Here's a link to the paper (thoughtfully provided by the Times) so you can read and judge it for yourself.

I don't understand the point of trying to drive panic with stories that are so misleading - and, frankly, so easily checked.

1/ As you sit home watching #COVID death counts spiral, please know the official @CDCgov guidance for coding COVID-related deaths is as follows: any death where the disease “caused or is assumed to have caused or contributed to death.” Confirmed lab tests are not required...

1:06 PM  29%

NVSS National Vital Statistics System

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

Back to Florida: 20 million people, 27,000 empty hospital beds - and a total of 85 new #COVID hospitalizations today (down for the fourth day in a row) 800 new positive tests, the lowest in a week. Hey @gorskon - I thought evidence mattered to you. Was I wrong?

This is insane. How would the lockdown have accomplished this? And if it didn't, what did? Herd immunity b/c this has been here for months? What are the possible explanations?

1/ @IHME_UW appears to have updated its model: It has cut the number of hospital beds needed for #COVID patients on the peak of April by 45% - from 262,000 to 141,000 and ICU beds by 26% - from almost 39,700 to 29,200. Yet deaths remain almost the same, around 80,000...

Nobody says COVID-19 is not real, that it can't tax hospitals or kill people, esp. if they are over 75 or have comorbidities. But right now the best CURRENT projection is for 61,000 US deaths. That was the 2017 flu season. Why have we shut the country?

Holy moly, Batman. This study out of Japan (where testing is uncommon) suggests the real infection rate there is 400 to 800 times (!) the reported rate (and, like many European cities, Kobe, Japan had a 3% antibody rate by early April). medrxiv.org/content/10.110 …

In turn, this raises real questions about whether some of the apparent gap between Japan and Europe is real or an artifact of media/government reporting (look for an epidemic in nursing homes, you find one; don't and you don't?). Very hard to know.

Fun fact from the @cdcgpv surveillance data: of 4,000 #COVID hospitalizations for which they provide detailed age data, 29 were in people under 18. That's not deaths or ICU visits - that's hospitalizations. The closing of the schools is nearly criminal at this point.

But I guess bashing the WH for not nationalizing ventilator production is more fun.

A nurse can generally take care of one to two ventilated patients as they require close monitoring. If on vent, generally will require extra IV lines or arterial lines to allow monitoring of oxygen and extra meds (more pharmacy support), respiratory therapists, lab to run tests

To avoid a rebound in transmission, these policies will need to be maintained until large stocks of vaccine are available to immunise the population – which could be 18 months or more. Adaptive hospital surveillance-based triggers for switching on and off population-wide social distancing and school closure offer greater robustness to uncertainty than fixed duration interventions and can be adapted for regional use (e.g. at the state level in the US). Given local epidemics are not perfectly synchronised, local policies are also more efficient and can achieve comparable levels of suppression to national policies while being in force for a slightly smaller proportion of the time. However, we estimate that for a national GB policy, social distancing would need to be in force for at least 2/3 of the time (for $R_0 \geq 2.4$, see Table 4) until a vaccine was available.

However, there are very large uncertainties around the transmission of this virus, the likely effectiveness of different policies and the extent to which the population spontaneously adopts risk reducing behaviours. This means it is difficult to be definitive about the likely initial duration of measures which will be required, except that it will be several months. Future decisions on when and for how long to relax policies will need to be informed by ongoing surveillance.

They'll mix your antibody test result with a new PCR test result to create a new case. So, yes, it'll be a new case:

A new, and important, detail was reported late last week by Dr. Raul Pino, Orange County's Department of Health lead officer — the state DOH is now counting positive antibody tests into the daily total. But some could be people who just have antibodies and are fully recovered or who never knew they had it.

Yes, let's talk about the latest SETRAC data. It shows 19945 general "operational beds," of which 10446 are in use by all patients - and 2239 ICU beds (not counting 450 surge), of which 2190 are in use. So waiting patients account for about 1% of beds and 2% of ICU beds...

Yep. And the fact that we never saw this tells us all we need to know. Last I checked, the big grocery workers union had roughly 1 out of every 10,000 members die.

Sad, but not a apocalypse like the teachers are making it sound like if they go back.

From a summer school session in California: 200 students for six weeks, zero cases among any students or staff. It would be an anecdote except it matches practically all the data.

KEEP SCHOOLS CLOSED FOREVER! The little fools will figure it all out sooner or later.

We just concluded a summer session in a County on California's watch list. 200 students for 6 weeks, State guidance allowed this until the governor's order on Friday.

Zero cases among students, faculty, or staff. We wore masks and spaced things out.

Closing schools is not scientific. It also harms students, very alarmingly our teachers found that the incoming remedial cohort is much further behind the remedial cohorts of previous years.

Another day of declining hospitalizations in SE Texas and Arizona, both down more than 10% from peak, and now ICUs and ventilations are dropping too. If they aren't past peak they're doing a good job of pretending.

1/ Yes, the geniuses at @IHME_UW have updated their model again. According to them, we are now PAST the peak of hospitalizations - which were cut yet again, to 57,000 beds from 94,000 in the previous forecast (and 262,000 in the April 1 forecast - April Fool's!)...

2/ In other words, they cut their expectation for hospitalizations by almost -80%. In 10 days. Everybody makes mistakes, right? What et al will no doubt focus on is a slight increase in death projections, to about 69,000...

The @stanford antibody testing is out - it estimates ~3% of people in Santa Clara County (CA) have been infected and recovered, 50-plus times the estimate of confirmed active cases. More evidence #SARSCoV2 is far more widespread and thus less dangerous than expected.

without seroprevalence data to inform epidemic parameters. We measured the seroprevalence of antibodies to SARS-CoV-2 in Santa Clara County. Methods On 4/3-4/4, 2,50 adult county residents for antibodies to SARS-CoV-2 using a lateral flow immunoassay. Participants were recruited using Facebook ads targeting a representative sample of the county by demographic and geographic characteristics. We report the prevalence of antibodies to SARS-CoV-2 in a sample of 3,330 people, adjusting for zip code, sex, and race/ethnicity. We also adjust for test performance characteristics using 3 different estimates: i) the test manufacturer's data, ii) a sample of 37 positives and 30 negatives controls tested at Stanford, and iii) a pooled weighted of both. Results The unadjusted prevalence of IgG positive to SARS-CoV-2 in Santa Clara [illegible] The population prevalence of SARS-CoV-2 antibodies in Santa Clara County implies that the infection is much more widespread than indicated by the number of confirmed cases. Population prevalence estimates can now be used to calibrate epidemic and mortality projections.

1984 and Animal Farm get the attention, but Homage to Catalonia - Orwell's non-fiction on the Spanish Civil War - might be his best.

Wow, did he hate reporters:

1. Allentown, Pa.-based Lehigh Valley Health Network has furloughed about 900 employees who work at its physician practices, according to The Morning Call. The email obtained by the publication stated that furloughed workers can return to work after in-person patient visits return to normal levels.

2. Halifax Health, based in Daytona Beach, Fla, has placed 300 staff members on a mandatory four-month furlough, according to The Daytona Beach News Journal. The news comes just nine days after the system asked for volunteers to take furloughs. The health system is also mandating that nonclinical staff not included in the furlough take one day off per week.

3. Citing financial pressure from the COVID-19 pandemic, Escondido, Calif.-based Palomar Health has issued temporary layoffs for 221 employees, according to NBC San Diego. The furloughs will last 21 days and may be extended. Palomar Health said it is facing a significant revenue decline and incurred more

Hello Alex,

My name is and I've been following you on Twitter quite a bit. I live in Toronto, so we've actually been subjected to a lockdown for a bit longer than U.S. cities.

I'm so happy to see someone like you bringing to light the sheer insanity of the lockdowns and the crushing impact it's having on society. It infuriates me to see such a reckless experiment on humanity.

I have a three year old, so not school aged, but to say it's been a challenge is the understatement of the year. My brother, on the other hand, has two school aged children -

As you watch this video, remember two points:

1) What we accept as normal ratchets over time if we don't explicitly fight it.

2) When police officers try and fail to exercise authority, they're humiliated; humiliation is dangerous for work that depends on public compliance.

A nurse can generally take care of one to two ventilated patients as they require close monitoring. If on vent, generally will require extra IV lines or arterial lines to allow monitoring of oxygen and extra meds (more pharmacy support), respiratory therapists, lab to run tests

So what does this imply about the IFR when we look at places like, say, Bergamo or New York City where 0.3-0.5% of the entire populations died? If a decent fraction of the population was already immune, we'd have to conclude the IFR is much higher than other studies imply, right?

Also Alex, teachers unions are coordinating call-ins to EAP lines to ask for mental health referrals, solely to drive up numbers to show "teachers are terrified for their lives about teaching in schools." That's the level of emotional manipulation going on.

So what does this imply about the IFR when we look at places like, say, Bergamo or New York City where 0.3-0.5% of the entire populations died? If a decent fraction of the population was already immune, we'd have to conclude the IFR is much higher than other studies imply, right?

As President Trump presses for states to reopen their economies, his administration is privately projecting a steady rise in the number of coronavirus cases and deaths over the next several weeks. The daily death toll will reach about 3,000 on June 1, according to an internal document obtained by The New York Times, a 70 percent increase from the current number of about 1,750.

Alex, just saw the report about you and Elon Musk possibly forming a media company. Not sure how serious this is, but I did want to touch base. I'm working on a piece for the magazine on writers, academics, journalists, podcasters et al., who don't fit inside the conventional media parameters. From a reader in Dallas; if Texas has passed its peak (and the evidence is stronger by the day) without a return to lockdown or even much social distancing... where's the second wave? Are we looking at T-cell cross-protection and herd immunity? If not, what's the explanation?

> I live in Dallas, Tx. Today I ran multiple errands. The amount of traffic that I saw on the roads and in a variety of different types of stores seemed like an absolutely normal Monday of any year. If anything, it seemed like more than the typical amount of activity. My two main takeaways are as follows. 1) Texas is essentially completely open by any practical standard. So whatever minor increases that we have been seeing in deaths, that is with Texas activity roaring at full pace. 2) It seems nonsensical and completely arbitrary to me that there still are certain restrictions in place. If the virus is spreading, there is so much activity right now that any current restrictions would have zero chance of making any difference. It would be the equivalent of saying all stores on the right side of the street are allowed open but all stores on the left side of the street must remain closed. There are so many people moving around (many frequently coughing and

A school rebellion is brewing in Fort Worth; I have heard from three people there today (including a furious teacher). Schools were to open on 8/17. Now the health dept. has ordered them online only until Sept. 28. Religious schools are exempt. Guess the virus doesn't hit them.

1/ This email came from a German reader. To summarize: on April 15 the official German public health/disease control institute published a paper showing that moderate social distancing reduced #SARS_CoV2 spread but the hard lockdown was useless.

2/ Of note, the paper assumes a reproduction cycle of 4 days. Thus the epidemic can spread fast - and will be hugely sensitive to changes in R (how many people 1 infected person infects in turn). At an R of 3.1 with a cycle of 4 days, 1 infection will become 10,000 in a month!

It's not like the flu, bro!

Only this chart from the 2007 @CDCgov guide to pandemic preparation says in terms of mortality it's just like a Category 2 flu pandemic (Category 1 is a typical year).

Know what actions the CDC proposes for a Cat 2 pandemic? Here's a hint: not much.

Hey, look, a "country level analysis" today in a crummy little journal called @thelancet says "full lockdowns and widespread testing were not associated with reduced COVID-19 mortality." Whoopsie! Everybody makes mistakes. thelancet.com/journals/eclin ...

Increasing COVID-19 caseloads were associated with countries with higher obesity (adjusted rate ratio [RR]=1.06; 95%CI: 1.01-1.11), median population age (RR=1.10; 95%CI: 1.05-1.15) and longer time to border closures from the first reported case (RR=1.04; 95%CI: 1.01-1.08). Increased mortality per million was significantly associated with higher obesity prevalence (RR=1.12; 95%CI: 1.06-1.19) and per capita gross domestic product (GDP) (RR=1.03; 95%CI: 1.00-1.06). Reduced income dispersion reduced mortality (RR=0.88; 95%CI: 0.83-0.93) and the number of critical cases (RR=0.92; 95% CI: 0.87-0.97). Rapid border closures, full lockdowns, and

I posted this meta-analysis - from a peer-reviewed journal published by @cdcgov - a while back but it seems like a good time to do so again, this time with highlighting! For those of you who missed it, here's the takeaway: Masks are useless.

In our systematic review, we identified 10 RCTs that reported estimates of the effectiveness of face masks in reducing laboratory-confirmed influenza virus infections in the community from literature published during 1946–July 27, 2018. In pooled analysis, we found no significant reduction in influenza transmission with the use of face masks (RR 0.78, 95% CI 0.51–1.20; $I^2$ = 30%, p = 0.25) (Figure 2). One study evaluated the use of masks among pilgrims from Australia during the Hajj pilgrimage and reported no major difference in the risk for laboratory-confirmed influenza virus infection in the control or mask group (33). Two studies in university settings assessed the effectiveness of

I'm old enough to remember when Dr. Thomas Inglesby of the Center for Health Security was against quarantines for #SARSCoV2.

It was about 10 weeks before he said the United States would have to lockdown indefinitely.

What changed? Dunno, I guess the virus got less dangerous.

> Tom Inglesby ✓ @T_Inglesby

I've asked Dr. Inglesby to comment for the booklet. Hope he responds.

Hi Alex,

I have 3 children, 2 of whom are special needs.

My son is 4 with autism. His aba therapy ceased coming to our which is 6 hours per day,I, 5 days per week. Without intensive aba he is restless and hyper focused on one interest for days on end.

My daughter is 2 with cerebral palsy. Her physical therapy has ceased and the progress she was making toward walking has stalled completely.

We work with them the best we know throughout the day but we arent trained and we also have jobs.

1/ Hey, remember how everyone who worked at that meatpacking plant in South Dakota got coronavirus and was going to die? This @nytimes story was April 15. As of now, 16 days later, South Dakota has 17 deaths total - ONE in anyone under 50, none under 40...

South Dakota Meat Plant Is Now Country's Biggest Coronavirus Hot Spot

Refugees from around the world worked at the Smithfield pork factory in Sioux Falls. Now they face mounting illness and the sudden loss of their jobs.

Should be noted that in the Pandemic readiness plan which all the Dems point to as the "in place policy" that Trump should have followed mentions masks as suggested but not required.

Chapter 9 - Institutions: Protecting Personnel and Ensuring Continuity of Operations

Use of Face Masks

The benefit of wearing disposable surgical or procedure masks at school or in the workplace has not been established. Mask use by the public should be based on risk, including the frequency of exposure and closeness of contact with potentially infectious persons. Routine mask use in public should be permitted, but not required. The Federal Government will develop policies and guidance on the use and efficacy of masks. Other, more advanced respiratory protection may be indicated in certain instances, depending on the degree of exposure risk.

The spike comes after people start wearing masks. And they do wear masks in other countries lest they face fines, imprisonment, and/or being shot.

Deaths lag but it looks like the Sunbelt spike has topped out without hospital overrun or even severe strain (aside from a couple isolated hospitals). And far fewer deaths than wave one.

As pointed out - that figure (fig3) does show a rebound when interventions turn off, but the plan is to keep interventions for (or to "pump the breaks") until a solution comes in place

Shouldn't surprise me, but the amount of seemingly intelligent people that believe CoVid just takes healthy kids (or even adults) and just kills like the plague continues to amaze me. Clearly they live in a bubble of information.

1/ One last point on the [illegible] model: It now predicts about 15,600 New York state deaths. About the only thing the model has gotten right is short term death counts; that figure seems at least marginally plausible...

[illegible]

2/ But that implies that the rest of the US will have about 65,000 - 4x+ NYS. Right now, the rest of the country is at about 1.4x NYS - and the epidemic does not seem to be accelerating elsewhere...

3/ And we have seen for the last 3 months that, for whatever reason, regional (or national) disparities don't lessen much once they're in place. If the rest of the US remains at that 1.4x level, deaths ex NY would be about 23,000, and the US total would be a bit under 40,000.

So we peaked BEFORE the significant closures even began?

Time to start using more straightforward language and calling out people who don't tell the truth, like @pbump. The original model explicitly accounted for the effect of lockdowns. It was wrong in real-time, embarrassingly so; that's why it's been updated. (It's still wrong.)

Philip Bump @pbump
A notable shift downward in projected deaths from coronavirus is already being spun as "experts were wrong!!" Instead of "hey, the thing experts said would drive down deaths might be driving down deaths."

1/ I'm going to try to explain this once more for all the blue-checks insisting that they KNOW lockdowns work.

The models failed. In real time. Even in NY state, the April 1 iteration of @IHME_UW model estimated four times the hospitalizations last week as were taking place.

2/ But it's crucial to understand WHY they failed.

There is a TIME LAG between infection, symptoms, hospitalization, ICU care, and death. 5 days on average from infection to symptoms, several more days to hospitalization, 2-3 more to ICU care. These are averages, but correct.

9 152 565

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 10. Apr.

3/ The models assumed (not unreasonably) that in places like New York, lockdowns had come TOO LATE. Between March 17 and March 25, hospitalizations in NY rose 7X. The models assumed that because of the time lag, the rise would go on UNTIL THE EFFECTS OF THE LOCKDOWN KICKED IN...

I am going to follow up with data directly from Sweden but it appears deaths are plunging - not a shock, given the ICU trends. Recall, Sweden has no lockdown. Deaths per-capita have been far lower than the U.K., Italy, France, or Spain, just higher than other Nordic countries.

COVID-19 has killed more Americans in 6 weeks than the flu does in a year.

And that is WITH all the stark measures we've taken.

Why haven't more lawyers taken up the cause to file suits? There are enough of them on Twitter complaining. Why aren't they trying to do anything?

Because many of the states ratified and signed into law emergency powers for governors to use. It's quite broad and would be a tough battle to win in the courts.

You think it's just Sweden? For a month Team Apocalypse has actively rooted for the Sunbelt to fail and talked about how wonderful Europe and NY are - ignoring the death tolls there. And they've pretended the US can't open schools like Europe bc we have lots of positive tests...

No one who has looked at the history of US crime from 1965 through 2015 (a 50-year sample!) can be surprised that the hard left's fantasies about deprisonalization and criminal justice "reform" are blowing up. But even the worst cynic must be shocked at how quickly it's happened.

But I guess bashing the WH for not nationalizing ventilator production is more fun.

And here's updated Florida data (remember, Florida just went on a relatively loose lockdown, no way it could be having an impact yet): 2000 FEWER patients and 200 FEWER ICU patients than yesterday. You read that right. Florida hospitals are emptier today.

Florida is the third largest state in the US, huge elderly population, remember those spring break pictures? The nasty NYC outbreak increasingly appears entirely disconnected from what's happening almost everywhere else in the US.

1/ Morning folks. Wondering why @CDCgov is using such aggressive rules for death counts? Look - there's considerable evidence #COVID infections have peaked in the US. Even the POTUS comments last night warning about this being the "toughest week" suggest as much (deaths lag)...

2/ And the emerging data out of Florida, Southern California, etc suggest that this virus - like most respiratory viruses - doesn't do well when the weather warms and UV rays get stronger. Great news! Right? Right? Well... we're at under 9,000 deaths now.

65 219 784

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 5 apr

3/ Suppose the president is right. And this is the "toughest week." And we average 1,500 deaths a day. That gets us to almost 20,000 deaths by April 12. By then the trend should clearly be down, I don't think it will be arguable...

33 195 643

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 5 apr

4/ 20,000 deaths, with perhaps that many more coming over the next month (deaths lag). That's terrible! Yeah. It is. But [illegible] is estimating 24,000-63,000 flu deaths this year.

3/ And while acknowledging the economic crisis, Vance more or less throws up his hands, saying that it would have happened anyway. But the difference between voluntary social distancing and what we have now is the distance between recession and depression. That's no exaggeration.

4/ Vance broadly ignores all the non-economic effects of the lockdown too - closing schools, even though kids don't appear to be at risk - and the general fraying of society that has already begun, social shaming, neighbors calling out the police on neighbors...

5/ And the move to continue to extend the lockdowns even in places that have seen no epidemic. The longer this continues, the harder it is to fix the economy and society. We have difficult choices to make, but the media panic and focus on outlier cases does not help field hospital deployed to CenturyLink Field Event Center to the U.S. Department of Defense.

Washington State shuts down its COVID field hospital. Total patient count: Zero. The move is ""aimed at helping another state with a more significant need..." Good luck with that. kjow.org/stories/washin …

The 250-bed facility, for which setup began on March 30, was intended to help Washington state's health care system tend to non Covid-19 patients in the event of a hospital surge.

But just three days after announcing the facility was ready to receive patients, officials say they're returning the hospital to the federal government.

The action is aimed at helping another state with a more significant need for hospital capacity at this time, according to the Governor's Office. The facility did not see any patients during the time it was slated to operate in Seattle.

Lots of out of work employees are undoubtedly beginning to think the media panic messaging fell far short of truthful or useful information. Social distancing we understand. Closing the entire country down, not so much.

Rush nails it. The doomsday modelers always win cuz if the doomsday happens they can say see we warned you & if it doesn't they say aren't you glad you listened to us. Fauci says models are only as good as the assumptions put into it. And we all know what happens when we assume.

4/ High school seniors are being denied their only chance at graduation and prom:

> My other son who is in high school is a senior this year. He has a positive attitude but i know this hurts him. He is the goalie of the lacrosse team and had trained all year to help his team make it to playoffs. He hasn't complained but i know he wants to be able to have a few games and be with his friends in May to say goodbye to teachers and friends at school. Try to imagine if you were a senior. Some seniors have complained or commented their sadness under Governor Dewine's tweets but they get shot down or told they don't care about other ppl dying- that they are being selfish. Imagine your senior year ending like this. I wonder if Lt Gov Husted would feel differently if his son was a senior or his own football career as a senior in high school or college never happened?

I'm watching the Ohio news conference and, for the first time since this lockdown started, a reporter just asked - why not open TODAY based on the NY and other antibody tests, the Israeli study showing lockdowns don't help, AND the fact that Ohio hospitals are 92% vacant!

Even so, have them try to explain how pivoting to a "containment strategy" is even possible with so very many asymptomatic carriers walking around?

@AlexBerenson

So the poll is unscientific, but it's still striking - almost 1 in 5 people who've answered said they plan to leave lockdown states for free states as early as June 1. I don't think that's realistic for people with families - more of a wish - but it shows the depth of the anger.

> Serious poll question, please answer only if it applies to you: If you live in a state where lockdowns are likely to continue for some time, at what point would you plan on moving to a free state or at least renting a house there?

In a normal investigative reporting world the biggest question being chased right now might be how the guy who predicted "mad sheep" and nine-figure bird flu deaths and whose model depends on 13-year-old code he hasn't released somehow has the ear of the world's governments.

But hey, @neil_ferguson says everybody loves his code! And he's not biased at all!

(Actually he didn't even say that, he said the people he'd allowed to see it were "largely positive." Oh. Talk about a ringing endorsement.)

3/ In fact, the paper states explicitly "that U.S. hospitals could absorb a maximum of 26,000 to 56,000 additional ventilators at the peak of a national pandemic, as safe use of ventilators requires trained personnel."

512 195 4

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

4/ In other words, whatever happens with COVID, if we built a million new ventilators, 950,000 would be furniture.

Added bonus: the paper reports the US already has far more critical care beds per-capita than other nations: 35 per 100,000, compared to 12 in Italy, 7 in the UK...

5/ Here's a link to the paper (thoughtfully provided by the Times) so you can read and judge it for yourself.

I don't understand the point of trying to drive panic with stories that are so misleading - and, frankly, so easily checked.

Adaptive hospital surveillance-based triggers for switching on and off population-wide social distancing and school closure offer greater robustness to uncertainty than fixed duration interventions and can be adapted for regional use (e.g. at the state level in the US). Given local epidemics are not perfectly synchronised, local policies are also more efficient and can achieve comparable levels of suppression to national policies while being in force for a slightly smaller proportion of the time. However, we estimate that for a national QI policy, social distancing would need to be in force for at least 2/3 of the time (for $R_0 = 2.4$, say [also 4) until a vaccine was available.

4/ But even then, the explicit assumption was that cases would explode in fall 2020 if suppression did not continue. I do t know how anyone not ideologically blinded can possibly argue this - the graphs and data leave no room for interpretation.

To explain why he's saying that Ferguson is walking back his data, when Ferguson is saying he's not (but he is). Ferguson was wrong (thankfully), but can't bring himself to admit it.

1/ As you sit home watching #COVID death counts spiral, please know the official @CDCgov guidance for coding COVID-related deaths is as follows: any death where the disease “caused or is assumed to have caused or contributed to death.” Confirmed lab tests are not required...

cdc.gov

NVSS National Vital Statistics System

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
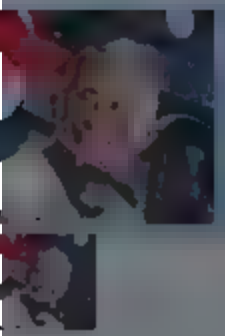
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.



When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

The @IHME_UW model vs. reality for New York State, April 4: more of the same, 65,400 beds projected, 15,905 actually used (new hospitalizations fell notably day-over-day); 12,000 ICU beds projected, 4,100 used. Still basically fiction, but at least it's not getting MORE wrong.

1/ I called the Italian peak 12 days ago; in retrospect, that was about 5 days early. In any case, Italy has now peaked; Spain probably has too (remember, deaths LAG). The final Italian toll will probably be in the range of the 25-45,000 excess deaths of the 2016/17 flu season...

Back to Florida: 20 million people, 27,000 empty hospital beds - and a total of 85 new #COVID hospitalizations today (down for the fourth day in a row) 800 new positive tests, the lowest in a week. Hey @gorskon - I thought evidence mattered to you. Was I wrong?

This is insane. How would the lockdown have accomplished this? And if it didn't, what did? Herd immunity b/c this has been here for months? What are the possible explanations?

1/ One last point on the @IHME_UW model: It now predicts about 15,600 New York state deaths. About the only thing the model has gotten right is short term death counts; that figure seems at least marginally plausible...

2/ But that implies that the rest of the US will have about 65,000 - 4x+ NYS. Right now, the rest of the country is at about 1.4x NYS - and the epidemic does not seem to be accelerating elsewhere...

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 6 d'abr.

3/ And we have seen for the last 3 months that, for whatever reason, regional (or national) disparities don't lessen much once they're in place. If the rest of the US remains at that 1.4x level, deaths ex NY would be about 23,000, and the US total would be a bit under 40,000.

That is a fantastic point. They keep waiting for this explosion everywhere when that hasn't happened even in other countries. Italy was largely confined to the north.. yet they keep saying US will get hit equally everywhere.. Doesn't make sense

1/ One last point on the @IHME_UW model: It now predicts about 15,600 New York state deaths. About the only thing the model has gotten right is short term death counts; that figure seems at least marginally plausible...

2/ But that implies that the rest of the US will have about 65,000 - 4x+ NYS. Right now, the rest of the country is at about 1.4x NYS - and the epidemic does not seem to be accelerating elsewhere...

3/ And we have seen for the last 3 months that, for whatever reason, regional (or national) disparities don't lessen much once they're in place. If the rest of the US remains at that 1.4x level, deaths ex NY would be about 23,000, and the US total would be a bit under 40,000.

That is a fantastic point. They keep waiting for this explosion everywhere when that hasn't happened even in other countries. Italy was largely confined to the north.. yet they keep saying US will get hit equally everywhere.. Doesn't make sense

Nobody says COVID-19 is not real, that it can't tax hospitals or kill people, esp. if they are over 75 or have comorbidities. But right now the best CURRENT projection is for 61,000 US deaths. That was the 2017 flu season. Why have we shut the country?

Serious question and I hope you respond with seriousness too.

COVID-19 has killed more Americans in 6 weeks than the flu does in a year.

And that is WITH all the stark measures we've taken.

"Flu +" seems like an understatement, no?

From a physician in Indiana who has signed and reviewed death certificates for almost 50 years: "doctors are using death by COVID-19 as a convenient diagnosis..."

Cause of death fallacy

Lee A. Fischer, M.D.

I'm a family physician who graduated med school in '72 and practiced family med in West Palm Beach for 31 years. During that time I signed hundreds of death certificates. For the last 25+ years I've reviewed and testified in hundreds of medical negligence cases. In the last 5 years 90% involved nursing home negligence. Obviously many of these nursing patients died so I review a lot of death certificates. I can tell you that more often than not the cause of death listed bares no resemblance to the actual cause. Many doctors still list "cardiorespiratory arrest" as

AT&T 11:03 AM 68%

Primary

I believe that doctors are using death by COVID-19 as a convenient diagnosis when they don't really know what caused their death. Unless someone has tested + for the virus and had symptoms and died there is no way to attribute their death to COVID-19. As you point out the # of deaths due to the "pandemic" is highly inflated and in my opinion for political gain. Keep spreading the news and your right on point analysis.

2/ Of note, the paper assumes a reproduction cycle of 4 days. Thus the epidemic can spread fast - and will be hugely sensitive to changes in R (how many people 1 infected person infects in turn). At an R of 3.1 with a cycle of 4 days, 1 infection will become 10,000 in a month!

Why can't the US media and (blue-state) policymakers keep two ideas in mind at once? #SARSCoV2 can be dangerous, especially to the elderly - but to respond by denying kids an education (and generally wrecking the economy and society with lockdowns of dubious value) is a mistake.

Remember - it is only April 21. In most states, schools have been out for only about a month. Closing through the end of the school year means another TWO months of lost schooling, and a five-plus-month break overall...

And there's a lot of evidence that many kids regress during the normal summer break - and that poor kids especially suffer, because their parent(s) may not have the time or resources to help them.

Gov. Tim Walz faces a key decision this week about whether to lift a stay-at-home order for a COVID-19 pandemic that is proving most deadly for long-term care residents, gumming up food production and spreading at a rate that nobody yet comprehends.

The death toll from COVID-19 reached 286 in Minnesota on Monday, but 223 involved long-term care facilities residents — who remain at greatest risk from the coronavirus infection due to age and existing

Florida: 223,000 positive #SARSCoV2 tests in three weeks - 10,000 a day - and ~NO CHANGE in hospitalizations or ICU occupancy statewide. You say epidemic, I say a lot of people getting colds, let's call the whole thing off. (We'll see if Florida has any excess mortality in July.)

Florida: 223,000 positive [illegible] tests in three weeks - 10,000 a day - and -NO CHANGE in hospitalizations or ICU occupancy statewide. You say epidemic, I say a lot of people getting colds, let's call the whole thing off. (We'll see if Florida has any excess mortality in July.)

Fun fact! On May 13 "covid 19 recovery consulting LLC" was registered in VA by @drphillipsmc. So long ago! Someone was thinking ahead.
Let's see what Dr. Phillips said about ending lockdowns then.

Oh. Businesses need REAL guidance to reopen? But who might provide it? Who indeed?

Oklahoma is my home. But we MUST ask ourselves what is "essential." For what is it worth getting sick, incurring debt,or even dying? Nail salons, barbers, massage, and even gyms need REAL guidance and customer protections for safe practice.

Serious question for the hive mind: are there any studies looking at #SARSCoV2/influenza coinfection rates in high-mortality regions in March/April? Or how those compare to confection rates for low-mortality regions now? I haven't seen any.

When I heard about this clip, I figured it had to have been from early March.

Nope. On July 13, @who promised "No return to the 'old normal.'"

Because of #SARSCoV2, which right now has a global death toll not quite that of a bad flu season. Say what now?

If another Spanish flu ever hits - much less anything worse - I'm truly terrified the developed world will collapse.

If a virus that kills 1 in 400 people - and maybe 1 in 10,000 people under 50 - causes this level of panic, what are we going to do if something serious strikes?

Wowowow. Read this thread to know what Team Apocalypse really wants. A "90% lockdown" for six weeks. Meaning: no interstate travel. Limited food production, supply chains, and healthcare (!). And, oh yeah, (apparently) forced mass isolation and quarantines. THIS IS INSANE.

Remember: right now, most Sunbelt states appear to be past peak. They have not locked down, they have not faced hospital overrun and have relatively low death tolls compared to NY in April. WHERE IS THE EMERGENCY MERITING THIS KIND OF RESPONSE?

And remember too: @aslavitt is not a fringe figure. He was head of CMS for Obama. He has 550,000 Twitter followers. He's on television regularly. And HE WANTS TO END INTERSTATE TRAVEL for a month or more.

People have lost their minds.

didn't do this in Mar-April and let's chalk it up to faulty instructions. But we know better now.
2. Keep the bars & restaurants & churches & transit closed. All hot spots.
3. Prohibit interstate travel10/

Andy Slavitt @ @ASlavitt · 5h
4. Prohibit travel into the country (no one will let us into their country so that shouldn't be hard).
5. Have hotels set up to allow people with symptoms to isolate from their families at no cost.

3/ In fact, the paper states explicitly "that U.S. hospitals could absorb a maximum of 26,000 to 56,000 additional ventilators at the peak of a national pandemic, as safe use of ventilators requires trained personnel."

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

4/ In other words, whatever happens with COVID, if we built a million new ventilators, 950,000 would be furniture.

Added bonus: the paper reports the US already has far more critical care beds per-capita than other nations: 35 per 100,000, compared to 12 in Italy, 7 in the UK...

I don't understand the point of trying to drive panic with stories that are so misleading - and, frankly, so easily checked.

To avoid a rebound in transmission, these policies will need to be maintained until large stocks of vaccine are available to immunise the population – which could be 18 months or more. Adaptive hospital surveillance-based triggers for switching on and off population-wide social distancing and school closure offer greater robustness to uncertainty than fixed duration interventions and can be adapted for regional use (e.g. at the state level in the US). Given local epidemics are not perfectly synchronised, local policies are also more efficient and can achieve comparable levels of suppression to national policies while being in force for a slightly smaller proportion of the time. However, we estimate that for a national QR policy, social distancing would need to be in force for at least 2/3 of the time (for $R_0$=2.4, see Table 4) until a vaccine was available.

1/ Please, Kadhim, show me where the report says fewer than 20,000 people might die with weeks instead of 18 months of “suppression”? The entire point of the report was that short-term measures wouldn’t work, which is exactly why it terrified people so much.

3/ Now, the Imperial College team did offer one scenario which it speculated might enable beds not to be overwhelmed in the short term - a heavy "suppression" strategy lasting a minimum of FIVE months, through September at a minimum...

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

4/ But even then, the explicit assumption was that cases would explode in fall 2020 if suppression did not continue. I do t know how anyone not ideologically blinded can possibly argue this - the graphs and data leave no room for interpretation.

Ferguson has amended all of these predictions as of yesterday, and drastically reduced predictions of fatality and severe cases by 500k fatalities in the UK to 20k total - get up to date info, this is completely false information

Ferguson has amended all of these predictions as of yesterday, and drastically reduced predictions of fatality and severe cases by 500k fatalities in the UK to 20k total - get up to date info, this is completely false information

To explain why he's saying that Ferguson is walking back his data, when Ferguson is saying he's not (but he is). Ferguson was wrong (thankfully), but can't bring himself to admit it.

3/ Now, the Imperial College team did offer one scenario which it speculated might enable beds not to be overwhelmed in the short term - a heavy "suppression" strategy lasting a minimum of FIVE months, through September at a minimum...

4/ But even then, the explicit assumption was that cases would explode in fall 2020 if suppression did not continue. I do t know how anyone not ideologically blinded can possibly argue this - the graphs and data leave no room for interpretation.

1/ As you sit home watching #COVID death counts spiral, please know the official @CDCgov guidance for coding COVID-related deaths is as follows: any death where the disease “caused or is assumed to have caused or contributed to death.” Confirmed lab tests are not required...

NVSS National Vital Statistics System

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

During the study period, 136,686 ILI-attributable excess deaths were estimated using the full model (IA + ET effect). The average annual mortality excess rate (MR) ranged from 40.6 to 70.2 per 100,000. The total number of excess ILI-attributable deaths during the 2014/15 season was 41,066, 65.6% higher compared to the previous season. During the 2016/17 season, the number of ILI-attributable excess deaths was 43,336, 57.9% more than the previous season.

Using the Goldstein index, the total number of excess deaths attributable to influenza in the 4-season study period was 68,068. The average annual mortality excess rate (MR) ranged from 11.6 to 41.2 per 100,000. Most of the influenza-associated deaths per year were among elderly individuals (≥65 years) (Table 3). During the sciencedirect.com/science/artici ...

During the study period, 136,686 ILI-attributable excess deaths were estimated using the full model (IA + ET effect). The average annual mortality excess rate (MR) ranged from 40.6 to 70.2 per 100,000. The total number of excess ILI-attributable deaths during the 2014/15 season was 41,066, 65.6% higher compared to the previous season. During the 2016/17 season, the number of ILI-attributable excess deaths was 43,336, 57.9% more than the previous season.

Using the Goldstein index, the total number of excess deaths attributable to influenza in the 4-season study period was 68,068. The average annual mortality excess rate (MR) ranged from 11.6 to 41.2 per 100,000. Most of the influenza-associated deaths per year were among elderly individuals (≥65 years) (Table 3). During the

Back to Florida: 20 million people, 27,000 empty hospital beds - and a total of 85 new #COVID hospitalizations today (down for the fourth day in a row) 800 new positive tests, the lowest in a week. Hey @gorskon - I thought evidence mattered to you. Was I wrong?

This is insane. How would the lockdown have accomplished this? And if it didn't, what did? Herd immunity b/c this has been here for months? What are the possible explanations?

1/ One last point on the @IHME_UW model: It now predicts about 15,600 New York state deaths. About the only thing the model has gotten right is short term death counts; that figure seems at least marginally plausible...

3/ And we have seen for the last 3 months that, for whatever reason, regional (or national) disparities don't lessen much once they're in place. If the rest of the US remains at that 1.4x level, deaths ex NY would be about 23,000, and the US total would be a bit under 40,000.

That is a fantastic point. They keep waiting for this explosion everywhere when that hasn't happened even in other countries. Italy was largely confined to the north.. yet they keep saying US will get hit equally everywhere.. Doesn't make sense

3/ And we have seen for the last 3 months that, for whatever reason, regional (or national) disparities don't lessen much once they're in place. If the rest of the US remains at that 1.4x level, deaths ex NY would be about 23,000, and the US total would be a bit under 40,000.

That is a fantastic point. They keep waiting for this explosion everywhere when that hasn't happened even in other countries. Italy was largely confined to the north.. yet they keep saying US will get hit equally everywhere.. Doesn't make sense

1/ One last point on the @IHME_UW model: It now predicts about 15,600 New York state deaths. About the only thing the model has gotten right is short term death counts; that figure seems at least marginally plausible...

Nobody says COVID-19 is not real, that it can't tax hospitals or kill people, esp. if they are over 75 or have comorbidities. But right now the best CURRENT projection is for 61,000 US deaths. That was the 2017 flu season. Why have we shut the country?

Wait, children can spread the virus to adults? Why was I not informed? That changes everything. The little brats shall stay locked in forever. We shall sacrifice the young for the old. That's how society works, right?

I find this thread genuinely bizarre. You are a former reporter and yet missing an obvious data point: CHILDREN CAN BE CARRIERS. Which means if we open schools (or playgrounds, etc.), they can spread the virus to each other and then back to their families.

Wait, children can spread the virus to adults? Why was I not informed? That changes everything. The little brats shall stay locked in forever. We shall sacrifice the young for the old. That's how society works, right?

How can the Times write a piece that purports to discuss policing and violence and NOT HAVE ANY STATISTICS ABOUT THE EXPLOSION IN HOMICIDES MANY CITIES ARE SEEING? The George Floyd protests may have waned, but the reality is that the streets are markedly less safe...

Spreads Far Beyond Portland

Galvanized in part by the deployment of federal agents in Portland, Ore., protesters have returned to the streets in Oakland, Seattle and elsewhere.

City leaders had managed to calm the most intense protests in most cities after soul-searching debates at the community level over funding for the police and the use of tear gas on protesters. Crowds have waned in most parts of the country, though pockets of resistance have continued.

And to ignore that fact is to deprive readers of crucial context here; it also makes parsing what the mayors are saying (we want some kinds of federal help, but not others) hard to understand. When ideology rules journalism, it fails on every level.

Meet @sarahnadav. Sarah makes her kids - 13 and 15 - sleep, eat, and urinate outside.

Their crime? They saw their aunt, a swim teacher who had a student (age 5) with #SARSCoV2. Now Sarah says they were "potentially exposed" - and a risk to her.

I wish I were making this up.

Seems as if Team Apocalypse is losing it. The random case surges in countries that "crushed the curve" or mandated masks, the way the Sunbelt has far fewer deaths than NY, the fact kids stubbornly refuse to get sick... reality is winning.

Team Apocalypse doesn't like reality.

Hey @Crimealytics - have you looked at homicide numbers this year? Are the trends as bad nationally as they seem?

I know politically you may find this topic uncomfortable, but the numbers are what they are - it looks to me like we're headed for the highest rate since the 1990s.

Bundgaard says the simple rules that currently exist in Denmark - hand-washing, social distancing, self-isolating if you're sick - are effective because they're easy to remember. He worries that using face masks might lead people to be "sloppy" in following other guidelines.

The Danish randomized trial on whether masks reduce COVID infections is done. Results to be published soon.

Meantime, the physician who ran the study says he hopes Denmark does NOT mandate masks.

No points for guessing what the final paper will show.

+20% would put us around 5.8ish per 100k which is where we were in 2006.

It's bad though and I've written on it.

But the worst 1 year change nationally is a 12.7% rise in 1968, so a 20% rise nationally would be badly unprecedented. Not saying it can't happen, just hasn't ever happened since we've had data.

And big cities overstate the national trend so less likely to be quite as awful.

Great point. And the average annual mortality in LTCFs is off the charts - 30-40%.

Which is just another way of saying the with/from distinction is all but impossible to make in many cases. Deaths are being pulled forward by months or even weeks.

I would like to see a comparison of "normal" deaths per month or year in a LTCF with this year.

So most deaths on these charts are just retroactively assigned to the covid file?

It's common sense. We know at least 50% of deaths were in LTC, and those patients have a 3-6 month life expectancy. So, at least 75K "COVID deaths" will end up washing out in an all-cause mortality analysis. The LTC and non LTC death counts should be treated separately.

It's not just a few cities: homicides are up 10-50% year-over-year in practically every big city - Denver, Phoenix, Los Angeles, Boston, Houston, St. Louis, Miami - everywhere.

Forget the crack epidemic. Murder rates haven't gone this bad this fast since the late 1960s.

Florida again: People over 85 (not 75, 85) make up 1 in 3 of #COVID deaths statewide - 5x as many deaths as everyone under 55.

Put another way: if you are over 85, you have a 1 in 300 chance of dying of #COVID in Florida in the last five months.

Under 55? 1 in 33,000.

BTW: Per [redacted], people 85 and over have about a 1 in 7 chance of dying annually from all causes.

This is why it's likely the excess mortality from [redacted] will be so hard to spot over the course of a year or more.

THEY CENSORED IT! It is based entirely on published government data and scientific papers. It doesn't say coronavirus isn't real or doesn't kill people (in fact, the worst-case death toll is likely to be striking to people). And Amazon won't run it.

These updated charts graph the rolling 7-day-average of #Covid deaths vs. the number of new positive tests ("cases") 10 and 16 days before. The gap has only grown since mid-July, just like Sweden's. Heavy testing and no lockdowns make for lots of cases but relatively few deaths.

Thank you. [redacted] has been a lifesaver throughout this but I'm disturbed by how quickly he dismissed these physicians claims. My layman takeaway: 1) HCQ studies used too high a dose. 2) No reason to be suppressing these meds 3) We need more studies on smaller doses

So, look, on the one hand the district deserves credit for trying to help working parents... but could there be more obvious proof that closing the schools is nothing more than a cave to @rweingarten and the gang?

It is impossible to be too cynical.

All you need to know about lockdowns in two easy charts: the first is the Apple mobility data, a rough proxy for the effectiveness of a lockdown. See how much better Italy and the UK did than the US?

The second is deaths per capita.

So if I have this right there's inclusive exclusivity, exclusive inclusivity, inclusive exclusive exclusivity, and that club that wouldn't let in Jews so they started their own. Plus Augusta. But I get confused sometimes so help me out here.

i'd like to make an a distinction between being inclusive and eliminating exclusivity. And you may be thinking, but when we improve inclusivity, doesn't that automatically eliminate exclusivity?

It doesn't and let me explain why.

Lol this is a macro-aggression on the English language. I'd like to believe there's a semi-coherent thought in here somewhere but I can't find it.

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

1/ Morning folks. Wondering why @CDCgov is using such aggressive rules for death counts? Look - there's considerable evidence #COVID infections have peaked in the US. Even the POTUS comments last night warning about this being the "toughest week" suggest as much (deaths lag)...

2/ And the emerging data out of Florida, Southern California, etc suggest that this virus - like most respiratory viruses - doesn't do well when the weather warms and UV rays get stronger. Great news! Right? Right? Well... we're at under 9,000 deaths now.

Why does Sweden vaccinate at a 97% rate w/ no mandates & the USA struggles to get to 90% w/ mandates in all 50 states?

1/ Soon enough, this panic will become like the Clinton impeachment or the Iraq war or Barry Bonds hitting 756, a moment in US history we all want to forget: Remember the spring when we wore masks and crashed the economy and pretended no one had ever died before? Craaazy times...

2/ Remember how that anchor wrote about taking baths? We'll call it the coronaflu and mock our own panic and in a year or two, once the obvious economic damage has passed, we'll just shrug and do our best to get back to life...

31 220 1.2K

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 21

3/ But we shouldn't. We all need to remember how we got here, how easily we were stampeded into panic, how we let the media keep us from letting our kids play with each other and drive us into our houses and give up our most essential liberties - in a matter of days...

57 529 2.0K

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 21

4/ "Those who would give up essential Liberty, to purchase a little temporary Safety, deserve neither Liberty nor Safety." Those words come from Benjamin Franklin, more than 250 years ago, and they are true now as they were then

Why can't the US media and (blue-state) policymakers keep two ideas in mind at once? [illegible] can be dangerous, especially to the elderly - but to respond by denying kids an education (and generally wrecking the economy and society with lockdowns of dubious value) is a mistake.

Remember - it is only April 21. In most states, schools have been out for only about a month. Closing through the end of the school year means another TWO months of lost schooling, and a five-plus-month break overall...

And there's a lot of evidence that many kids regress during the normal summer break - and that poor kids especially suffer, because their parent(s) may not have the time or resources to help them.

Rush nails it. The doomsday modelers always win cuz if the doomsday happens they can say see we warned you & if it doesn't they say aren't you glad you listened to us. Fauci says models are only as good as the assumptions put into it. And we all know what happens when we assume.

In this case though, they may not win. When everyone wakes up to the economic catastrophe we face, It will become clear that we're not "safe" but just "sorry"

So the poll is unscientific, but it's still striking - almost 1 in 5 people who've answered said they plan to leave lockdown states for free states as early as June 1. I don't think that's realistic for people with families - more of a wish - but it shows the depth of the anger.

> Serious poll question, please answer only if it applies to you: If you live in a state where lockdowns are likely to continue for some time, at what point would you plan on moving to a free state or at least renting a house there?

In a normal investigative reporting world the biggest question being chased right now might be how the guy who predicted "mad sheep" and nine-figure bird flu deaths and whose model depends on 13-year-old code he hasn't released somehow has the ear of the world's governments.

But hey, @neil_ferguson says everybody loves his code! And he's not biased at all!

(Actually he didn't even say that, he said the people he'd allowed to see it were "largely positive." Oh. Talk about a ringing endorsement.)

Following

Fascinating email from someone who works with big media organizations outside the US (he asked not to be identified more specifically). This is why @nytimes is so important - it sets the agenda worldwide in a way I think sometimes even its reporters don't understand.

'media'

Now, for the part you can use/quote if you were inclined to do so:

I have worked in close proximity for several years with several media outlets -- and in multiple conversations over the last several weeks with editors/anchors/journalists/news directors, I've come to realize something: the fear they spread comes to a great extent from a genuine place of fear they themselves fear. Of course, they know what sells -- "if it bleeds it leads" is an automatic reflex in the profession, as you know better than almost anyone.

Still, when it comes to COVID, there's clearly more at work. I heard an executive talk about how her

Florida is now almost certainly past peak; COVID hospitalizations are down both statewide and in South Florida; elective surgeries needing inpatient stays will resume Monday on much of the Gulf Coast.

Deaths lag; deaths with automated certificate matching likely lag even more.

Florida is now almost certainly past peak; COVID hospitalizations are down both statewide and in South Florida; elective surgeries needing inpatient stays will resume Monday on much of the Gulf Coast.

Deaths lag; deaths with automated certificate matching likely lag even more.

They hit the ~9-11% sero threshold around 7/15, stayed in range til around 7/22. In every state (except AZ, the big anomaly) this has been a signal of decrease in fatalities roughly t+21-28 days. Graph as of Sunday with DoD.

Oh, I'm just making it up.

miamidade.gov/information/i ...

Peak of 2,302 hospitalizations in Miami-Dade on 7/21; 2,061 today, a 10% drop.

The Hillsborough (Tampa Bay) dashboard shows a 22% weekly drop.

The statewide real-time dashboard is now at 8,395; not long ago it was over 9,000.

I'm curious where you're getting this information. Hospitalization data has been heavily interrupted in the change of how it's reported. They are still showing 20% positivity.

No, big tech/social media companies have no financial incentive to suppress and censor debate about lockdowns or social distancing. No financial incentive at all. (Reminder: the US economy just had its worst quarter EVER, while these four companies had their best.)

This is a devastating and data-focused takedown of HCQ from a pharmacist who specializes in treating infectious diseases. Of note, he points out that death rates are near zero in ALL Covid patients being treated as outpatients, so the fact HCQ "cures" them is meaningless.

Yep, more kids living life and catching colds (and for the vast majority them, the ro really IS a cold). Rich kids, poor kids, middle-class kids - it's summer. Let them be, please. This kind of wannabe shaming will just make them push back harder.

It looks as if deaths may have peaked in Arizona (for the last three weeks, the state has reported roughly 560-580 deaths per week), though their reporting is so lumpy and almost random on a daily basis it's tough to tell. The other states are a little behind.

So James Murdoch walks the plank and @foxnews will stay conservative. Whew. With the rest of the media increasingly openly leaning left, losing Fox as a counterweight would have been disastrous.

Aside from @cnn - which has limited carriage - and some conservative radio, I would have NO national media presence the last four months if not for Fox. Even @CNBC, after inviting me, refused to have me. Fox is far from perfect, but it's more important than ever.

So the guy who fancies himself the authority on the policy response to #Covid doesn't know FL/TX etc never locked down again. Which is kinda relevant since it suggests what they've seen (5-6 weeks from start of spike to peak hospitalizations) IS THE NATURAL COURSE OF SARS-COV-2.

From @cdcgov: #SARSCoV2 risk of death to kids is 1 in 1,000,000. Those are LOTTERY odds - translating into about 70 kids under 18 (almost all with severe underlying conditions). By way of comparison, more than 1,000 kids died of drowning in 2017. OPEN SCHOOLS NOW. #doyourjob

We are seeing somewhat clearer signs of declining cases and hospitalizations in Arizona, and to a lesser extent, Florida and Texas. But to be honest, that may be partly because so many people got COVID in those states that susceptibility is now lower.

Fact check: probably true. Those 300,000 positive tests translate into between 1.5M and 4.5M actual infections (assuming super-widespread testing means the real multiple might be as low as 5x) - for an infection fatality rate of 0.09% to 0.33%, and an average age of death of ~80.

A Progressive Libertarian @Tiggersdad2
Replying to @ricksheatcool @AlexBerenson

Yes. Of the 300k cases that Mr. Berenson alluded to in his tweet, between 4,000 and 4,500 will die. The CFR in FL is currently running on the high end of that band. To corroborate this, over 1,200 deaths have been reported in the last week. What are you missing?

THEY CENSORED IT! It is based entirely on published government data and scientific papers. It doesn't say coronavirus isn't real or doesn't kill people (in fact, the worst-case death toll is likely to be striking to people). And Amazon won't run it.

Further, the authors make NO effort to compare the [illegible] spread in countries that DID use lockdowns with those that didn't... they merely track the infection rate by day and assume any changes resulted from lockdowns (note to [illegible] - I got your tautology right here)...

But without comparing countries that DIDN'T lock down to those that did, they have no way of knowing if the decrease from the early rapid spread simple represents the natural and normal track of the virus...

And further, their own analysis shows that lockdowns reduced the speed of spread by less than 40% everywhere (about 30% in the US) - meaning spread was still very rapid post-lockdown. Even worse, when they look at individual policies in the United States...

In the end, this natural experiment we've run for five months (and still are in places like Melbourne) is going to give epidemiologists a treasure trove of data about how outbreaks work - though it looks like at least 90% of them are too politicized to look at it honestly.

Incredible data out of Arizona: a pure demonstration of Farr's law in the absence of lockdowns or other "heroic" measures. Efforts to manage viral outbreaks only delay the downslope (which may be necessary in some cases, like HIV)...

Barring a huge slowdown this fall, murders in the US will be up this year by the most in at least 50 years - probably the most in any year since we have decent data. But sure, keep pretending this is about Trump.

Just a few fireworks near some ammonium nitrate stored on a pier for no reason. It only blew out windows for 10+ kilometers. Probably just a grease fire. Definitely not a serious grade explosive sponsored by a state actor. That would be ridiculous.

Yes, of course. 5 million pounds of ammonium nitrate stored in a warehouse in the port center of a city of 2 million people with a long history of sectarian violence and terrorism. Makes total sense.

Maybe. Or maybe the fire was set to draw first responders close. At this point no one can know. That is about the largest conventional explosion I can imagine, though.

1st and 2nd tweet I saw about this. The fire near the port in Beirut was burning like this, and likely spread, and that appears to have led to the major explosion. twitter.com/nabilhb...

Just a few fireworks near some ammonium nitrate stored on a pier for no reason. It only blew out windows for 10+ kilometers. Probably just a grease fire. Definitely not a serious grade explosive sponsored by a state actor. That would be ridiculous.

Yes, of course. 5 million pounds of ammonium nitrate stored in a warehouse in the port center of a city of 2 million people with a long history of sectarian violence and terrorism. Makes total sense.

Back in the day when the US wanted to simulate small nukes I believe they used 30000 pound ANFO bombs (obviously they explosion was way smaller, just for modeling, I think) - I knew this back in the day but I'd have to look it up to be sure.

Because there is no science at all in the @cdcgov @who @nasem @nki_dc @FolkhalsomyndA @Epidemio_Infect etc papers I quote at length in Part 2.

Best way to get full school reopenings:

MANDATE TEACHERS HAVE TO COME IN AND WORK FULL DAYS, even if the school is only open virtually.

Once they know they can't hang out at home, they will beg for kids to come back rather than dealing with online teaching.

Team Apocalypse v Team Reality, a story in two acts. ACT 1: @nytimes finds a rural hospital in a tiny and desperately poor county on the US/Mexico border - a hospital with NO intensive care beds - and proceeds to proclaim that the #Covid outbreak is "like a horror movie."

'Like a Horror Movie': A Small Border Hospital Battles the Coronavirus

The hospital in Starr County, Texas, had no I.C.U. at all, and only one doctor on duty for each shift. Then the coronavirus began surging through the Rio Grande Valley.

From the Dept. of Actual Facts, here's Georgia, which offers cases (positive tests) by day - they rolled weeks ago; the hospitalization plateau has lasted a bit longer than expected but should soon follow. See the big difference the start and end of the lockdown made? Me neither.

Serious question: at what point do @nytimes @washingtonpost etc care - or even notice - how much better the Sunbelt states, which did not lockdown as their cases rose - have done than the Northeast stares, which did? Or are they just gonna pretend forever?

THEY CENSORED IT! It is based entirely on published government data and scientific papers. It doesn't say coronavirus isn't real or doesn't kill people (in fact, the worst-case death toll is likely to be striking to people). And Amazon won't run it.

In other words, this is really a paper about China (as the authors basically admit - they say on page 2 that they lack "sufficient data" for detailed estimates of changes over time in any other country).

Further, the authors make NO effort to compare the [illegible] spread in countries that DID use lockdowns with those that didn't... they merely track the infection rate by day and assume any changes resulted from lockdowns (note to [illegible] - I got your tautology right here)...

But without comparing countries that DIDN'T lock down to those that did, they have no way of knowing if the decrease from the early rapid spread simple represents the natural and normal track of the virus...

And further, their own analysis shows that lockdowns reduced the speed of spread by less than 40% everywhere (about 30% in the US) - meaning spread was still very rapid post-lockdown. Even worse, when they look at individual policies in the United States...

Fascinating that this has set off the blue-checks as it has. And yet I understand why; the Pulitzer is their symbol, what the good give the good. The very thought a heretic might be considered worthy pains them, though they know such an abomination can never come to be...

> If the Pulitzer prizes were not so corrupted by politics, one would certainly be awarded to @AlexBerenson for his superb against-the-grain reporting on Covid 19 and the folly of the lockdowns used to fight it.

Oh good, now the scientific literature is getting corrupted too; apparently the "evidence bar" for models that claim lockdowns work is not the same as for those claiming we are approaching herd immunity.

This @latimes piece reports that CV might have reached California by December and 8% of patients who visited an urgent care center in mid-March had CV and didn't know it; more evidence that the virus has spread far wider (and is thus much less dangerous) than early estimates.

These early COVID-19 deaths in the San Francisco Bay Area suggest that the

The California Department of Public Health and the CDC did not begin community surveillance for COVID-19 in Santa Clara County until March 5. Samples were collected from 226 coughing, feverish patients who visited four urgent care centers; 1 in 4 turned out to have the flu. The state tested samples from a subset of 79 non-flu patients. Nine of them had COVID-19.

The result suggested that 8% of people walking into the urgent care centers carried the novel coronavirus, an

Kudos to @hendrickstreek - a top German virologist - who is desperately, if politely, trying to explain the uselessness if lockdowns: he said “most cases... originated from people being close together for a significant period of time...”

where and how SARS-CoV-2 is transmitted. Methods: Case reports were extracted from the local Municipal Health Commissions of 320 prefectural cities (municipalities) in China, not including Hubei province, between 4 January and 11 February 2020. We identified all outbreaks involving three or more cases and reviewed the major characteristics of the enclosed spaces in which the outbreaks were reported and associated indoor environmental issues. Results: Three hundred and eighteen outbreaks with three or more cases were identified, involving 1245 confirmed cases in 120 prefectural cities. We divided the venues in which the outbreaks occurred into six categories: homes, transport, food, entertainment, shopping, and miscellaneous. Among the identified outbreaks, 53.8% involved three cases, Btw: missed this yesterday, but @GovofCO is ending the Colorado lockdown on May 1 - retail, offices, then bars and restaurants by mid-May. Believe he is the first Democratic governor to take this step. Wonder why no one is screaming about the imminent Rocky Mountain apocalypse.

I received several e-mails from students who told me that their parents are not allowing them to go outside AT ALL. These kids, who are already dealing with the normal struggles of being teenagers, and who are doing so in a time of significantly increased mental health problems and take them, and I'm very worried that they're "learning" during all of this that their parents are cruel and that we don't want them around any longer since I have to keep telling them they can't go anywhere even when I do go shopping or something. We're doing our best and they seem ok even as they're getting more and more

2/ Kids with special needs are particularly hard hit.

In response to your query about children who are being adversely affected by his lock down I wanted to share my experience.

I am a pediatric physical therapist working (and a co-owner) in a clinic that provides physical, occupational and speech therapy services to children with various disabilities including cerebral palsy, autism spectrum disorder and various genetic and neurological diagnoses. We have been deemed an essential service and have kept our doors open after modifying the environment with enhanced sanitation and a "virtual" waiting room. However, the parents of our children are being told that their children are at very high risk to develop complications if their child contracts Covid-19. I have been unable to find any

The fact that these children are not receiving their therapies is doing them and their families harm. Children with CP who do not get therapy are at risk to develop musculoskeletal problems that could require surgery and they will lose functional abilities (like independent walking) as they lose range of motion and strength. Children with autism are becoming disregulated without their therapies resulting in increased behavior problems and creating chaos in their families as they struggle to understand the changes on their schedule and lack appropriate interventions.

This has been weighing on my mind and I appreciate you asking for input. This is a small 3/ Children with autism have had their routines disrupted and are having a difficult time adapting.

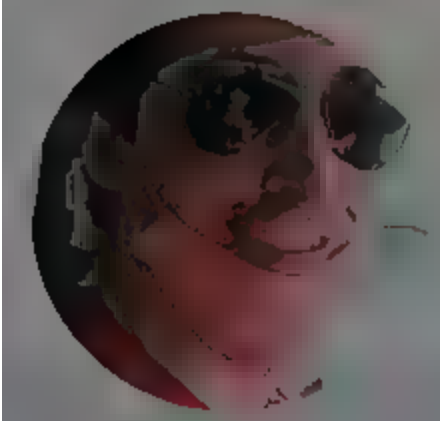
My name is and I am an Intervention Specialist (teach special ed). My own son is on the Autism spectrum, on the high functioning end. He has been struggling since this whole lockdown started. He is not a social butterfly, but he does enjoy time with school friends. He needs structure and predictability and that is clearly not happening now. I try to keep a certain structure to our days, but it's hard because I am working, my husband is working and his older brother has lots of schoolwork he also needs help with. The other thing Colin is struggling with is not understanding why he has to do schoolwork when he's not in school. There have been many meltdowns and I expect many more before all is said and done.



I've never like social media for children because I think it

I have a senior daughter in high school and a son who has autism and is in his first year of tech school. Both are having issues with extremely high anxiety and now I'm seeing depression.

Their social and emotional needs are taking a serious hit. My son's special needs friends are not receiving needed therapies and are having regressions due to the isolation as well.

My daughter's senior year is a wash, but she's still expected to take an AP exam next month. The digital learning is a joke - the platforms crash every day.

They both are working still - my son at a grocery store and Ppl who oppose reopening say it's too early, we're not ready—which is to say THEY aren't ready.

So then don't go out. But let those of us who are ready go out. Extend the provision to owners/employees: If you aren't ready, stay home. Businesses won't be at full capacity anyway

Incredible data from Oregon suggesting much of the recent rise in all-cause mortality is lockdown rather than #Covid related - that people may simply be dying at home because they are too frightened to go to hospitals and failing to get medical treatment for other conditions.

Holy moly, Batman. This study out of Japan (where testing is uncommon) suggests the real infection rate there is 400 to 800 times (!) the reported rate (and, like many European cities, Kobe, Japan had a 3% antibody rate by early April). medrxiv.org/content/10.110 …

In turn, this raises real questions about whether some of the apparent gap between Japan and Europe is real or an artifact of media/government reporting (look for an epidemic in nursing homes, you find one; don't and you don't?). Very hard to know.

Wish I'd had this available for Part 2: an Italian newspaper reports the Italian government IGNORED its own scientists when it imposed a national lockdown on March 9; two days before, they'd recommended a partial quarantine of the hardest-hit provinces. Panic is the real virus.

Arizona: hospitalizations for Covid are now just over half the July 13 peak, positive tests have fallen similarly, and it looks like deaths are rolling too. A very hopeful sign for Texas and Florida, which just reported its lowest Tuesday-Saturday death figure in three weeks.

Miami - the epicenter of the Florida epidemic - is clearly rolling now too, with hospitalizations down ~20% since the July peak. Of note, Miami-Dade County has 2.7 million people; last month it averaged three #Covid deaths a day in people under 60.

Coupla things might work: handwashing, not sneezing on people, staying home if you're sick. (Masks? Don't start.) Maybe, maybe not, but they can't hurt. Unlike lockdowns. And they're all free!

But you can't have endless press conferences just to tell people to wash their hands.

Another look at SE Texas (Houston). Genuinely stunning how quickly the tide rolls out - seemingly faster in a non-lockdown environment. Also stunning that there is ~NO change in overall bed counts as #Covid counts rise and fall; are these patients with or from Covid?

Just FYI, first chart is ICU beds, down over 30% from peak July 18, second is general beds, down over 40% from peak July 15. Almost exactly like Arizona. Team Apocalypse can't catch a break.

1/ As you sit home watching #COVID death counts spiral, please know the official @CDCgov guidance for coding COVID-related deaths is as follows: any death where the disease "caused or is assumed to have caused or contributed to death." Confirmed lab tests are not required...

NVSS National Vital Statistics System

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

IMO, the only thing that is going to clear this up is to know the mortality displacement or excess.

Take average mortality rates over the flu season for a 10 year period in a given country or region, compare with current mortality of this season, compute the difference.

Asymptomatic spread Alex.... I'm telling you.... that's the biggest lie/propaganda of this. If it happens, it's very rare and not a reason to lock the economy and healthy people in their homes. It went purposefully unquestioned by our media and CDC officials.

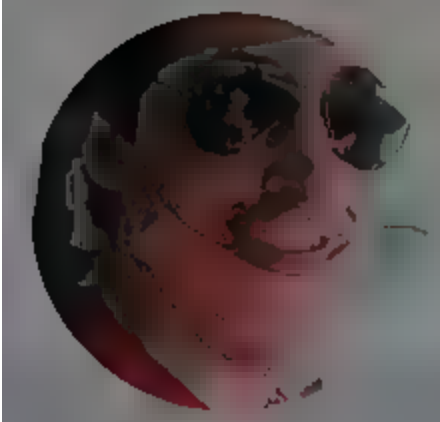
He was arrested for rape, then freed in April because of the (nonexistent) risk he faced from #Covid.

Last week he (allegedly) finished the job - killing the woman he raped.



The lies the criminal justice "reformers" tell have real consequences.

The death of any child is tragic. But before we terrify parents, someone needs to explain how a respiratory virus that is usually harmless to kids makes a healthy seven-year-old have a fatal seizure. So many #covid-linked deaths in people under 40 have these strange details.

LOCAL NEWS

Chatham Co. coroner offers details in COVID-19 death of 7-year-old

[illegible], Ga. (WSAV) – A 7-year-old boy has died of COVID-19 in Chatham County, the Georgia Department of Public Health (DPH) reported Thursday.

This marks not only the youngest death in Chatham County but in the state of Georgia.

The child has not been identified. Public health officials only provide details on a COVID-19 victim's age, gender, race, county of residence and if they had underlying medical conditions to order.

Chatham County Coroner Dr. Bill Wessinger tells News 3 the boy had a seizure in the shower and was rushed to the emergency room. He later died at the hospital.

Doctors have reportedly observed seizures in a small subset of patients with COVID-19.

"This child's death is absolutely tragic, and we are praying for their loved ones in this difficult time," a statement from [illegible]

I don't know what dininformation is - talking about #Covid at a restaurant that's half-empty because of pointless rules? - but you should tell Australia how well strict lockdowns work. Or Japan. New Zealand is an N of 1 and the exception, not the rule.

Nor can they decide if masks make any difference in stopping asymptomatic transmission of flu (or symptomatic transmission, tbh, but then a mask would at least be a useful signal: I'm sick, stay away). But when it comes to the ro, we've proven masks work. In 4 months. Science!

Attention citizens! Your Dept. Of Pandemia reminds you to carry at least three masks at all times. Continually touching, the removing, and swapping them ensures all three are equally clean. If you're not sure, just sniff them. If they stink, they're working. Attention citizens!

So it's not at all difficult to understand what's happening with #covid data right now. Hospitalizations are plunging in much of the Sunbelt (positive tests peaked a while ago) and deaths seem to be starting to follow. The "second wave" - more of a driblet, really - is receding.

Further, what if another driblet wave hits the Midwest - the states that really matter electorally? Will the media cover it responsibly and put in context (lol we all know the answer to that)? So I'm not sure the end of this spike matters as much as it might seem.

cdc.gov

NVSS National Vital Statistics System

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
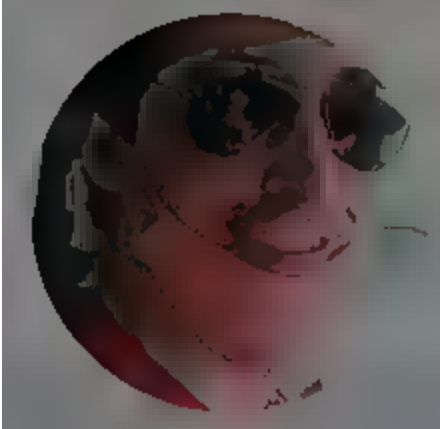
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.



Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

From Sweden: a new study shows at least 11 percent of people in Stockholm have #COVID antibodies (meaning they already have had COVID and recovered). The actual number is likely much higher. (Another scientist in the article says the real figure is 1/3.)

Why can't the US media and (blue-state) policymakers keep two ideas in mind at once? [illegible] can be dangerous, especially to the elderly - but to respond by denying kids an education (and generally wrecking the economy and society with lockdowns of dubious value) is a mistake.

21 96 379

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson

Remember - it is only April 21. In most states, schools have been out for only about a month. Closing through the end of the school year means another TWO months of lost schooling, and a five-plus-month break overall...

And there's a lot of evidence that many kids regress during the normal summer break - and that poor kids especially suffer, because their parent(s) may not have the time or resources to help them.

4/ High school seniors are being denied their only chance at graduation and prom:

> My other son who is in high school is a senior this year. He has a positive attitude but i know this hurts him. He is the goalie of the lacrosse team and had trained all year to help his team make it to playoffs. He hasn't complained but i know he wants to be able to have a few games and be with his friends in May to say goodbye to teachers and friends at school. Try to imagine if you were a senior. Some seniors have complained or commented their sadness under Governor Dewine's tweets but they get shot down or told they don't care about other ppl dying- that they are being selfish. Imagine your senior year ending like this. I wonder if Lt Gov Husted would feel differently if his son was a senior or his own football career as a senior in high school or college never happened?

So the poll is unscientific, but it's still striking - almost 1 in 5 people who've answered said they plan to leave lockdown states for free states as early as June 1. I don't think that's realistic for people with families - more of a wish - but it shows the depth of the anger.

> Serious poll question, please answer only if it applies to you: If you live in a state where lockdowns are likely to continue for some time, at what point would you plan on moving to a free state or at least renting a house there?

In a normal investigative reporting world the biggest question being chased right now might be how the guy who predicted "mad sheep" and nine-figure bird flu deaths and whose model depends on 13-year-old code he hasn't released somehow has the ear of the world's governments.
